

Cambridge Journal of Economics 2020 Conference

8&9 September 2020

Newnham College, Cambridge

The Cambridge Journal of Economics was first published in March 1977. The journal publishes papers from across the full range of heterodox perspectives, providing a forum for theoretical, applied, policy relevant, interdisciplinary, history of thought and methodological work. It has a strong emphasis on the promotion of realistic analysis, the development of critical perspectives, the deployment of innovative empirical methods and the construction of policy.

A conference sponsored by the Cambridge Journal of Economics is to be held at Newnham College, Cambridge, to provide a forum for the presentation of work that advances heterodox economics. It will start on the morning of 8 September 2020 and end on the evening of 9 September 2020. There will be a conference dinner on the evening of 8 September 2020.

Submissions of abstracts (maximum 500 words) are welcomed in any area of heterodox economics and related social science disciplines.
